

Are your kids “pigging-out” at the dinner table?
Then serve up some mealtime manners with...

Pass the Piggy!

Pass the Piggy is easy and fun to play. To prepare for the game, all you have to do is cut out the pig and place it on the dinner table. If someone uses bad manners – doesn't put their napkin in their lap, chews with their mouth open, talks with their mouth full, has their elbows on the table, holds their utensils incorrectly, slouches over to eat, gets up without being excused, burps, slurps or complains about the meal – then anyone can “squeal” on them by pointing out their bad manners.

The person with bad table manners then has to say “Oink, Oink” and the piggy is passed to them. The piggy is continually passed around to whoever gets squealed on during the meal.

Whoever has the pig at the end of the meal does the dishes! If your kids are really competitive, you can lighten it up by letting them catch daddy and mommy the first few nights.
